Keep your eyes peeled for some of these birds!

Are you a keen birdwatcher? We have an abundance of different birds in our gardens at the moment. There has been an influx of birds from Scandinavia and Northern Europe which have included Starlings, Hawfinches, Redwings and Fieldfares. Starlings are truly stars because of what they do just before dusk, called a Murmaration. You may have seen it on Winter Watch or Country File - they fly around in huge flocks of hundreds creating beautiful patterns across the sky and then settling down in trees for the night.

We also have a lot of different birds in our gardens, like the beautiful little bird called a Gold Crest, it is a little bit bigger than a Wren but the male has a distinctive yellow stripe down the centre of his head. You may also see a lot of Robins at this time of the year together, this will all change in a few weeks time when they go to find a mate and start producing their young. Some other birds you might see include Fieldfares and Redwings which are often seen together in huge flocks on farmland and open grounds like a Rugby Pitch, so keep your eyes out for them.

It is the time of year when a lot of birds start building nests and are looking for nest materials to do so. If you have a dog or cat, when you brush them, I'd recommend putting the hair outside and some birds will use it to make their nests warm and cosy. Birds also need to drink water this time of year but unfortunately a lot of ponds and water baths get frozen, so it is a good idea to put a ball in the water which stops it from freezing over and allows them to get a drink.

Be careful, however, if you do have a pond because Grey Herons are looking for food to feed their young and your goldfish are an ideal target for them. Put some netting over your pond to keep your fish safe. Herons have a varied diet and will also eat your frogs as well. I did read online that if you put out a decoy Heron it will deter them, this however is not true as my mother has one by her pond, it didn't work because a Heron is quite inquisitive, my mother has had a few visits from Herons who thought her decoy was real and landed to see for themselves!

This is also a really good time of year to build an insect/bug house if you fancy using a little imagination & creativity! Alternatively, you can buy one. You can also buy hedgehog houses so that when the hedgehogs come out of hibernation, they can find food easily and have somewhere to sleep during the day. You can also put food out such as tinned dog or cat food (not fish based), chopped up boiled eggs or you can find that some shops sell hedgehog food. Make sure to never give them milk because it causes them to have diarrhoea, instead - put out a shallow bowl of fresh water.

But most of all, enjoy Nature and keep your eye out, you never know what you might get in your garden. If you do get anything unusual and you want to tell us about it, we would love to hear from you, even better...get a picture of it if you can. If you love Spring, like me, we only have a few weeks left until we can all get some warm sunshine on our faces!

What happened last month?

Activities

We had 3 nature related events in February half term and didn't they go down a treat! Our scavenger hunt, birdfeeder making and map reading trails were great fun and the turnout was overwhelming considering the semi-miserable weather! Here are some images we'd like to share with you from this week. If you would like to enquire about future events or even suggest an event or activity, please email us on hhp@centralbedfordshire.gov.uk.

Volunteering

Last month's Friends of Houghton Hall Park volunteers' conservation task was coppicing and fort building led by the Greensand Trust, what fun they had! This is based on

Young Rangers celebrate conservation achievements

A group of Youth Rangers, supported by local environmental charity The Greensand Trust, celebrated the completion of a six-month volunteer conservation programme they took part in at Houghton Hall Park. The scheme was made possible through the Renaissance and Renewal Project for the park. The 2017-18 sessions, which began last September, has inspired and encouraged young people to learn new skills, gain valuable work experience and receive a recognised environmental award, while having fun and making a difference to the park.

The Youth Rangers worked together with site managers taking part in planning and skills building sessions, learning about and helping wildlife while working alongside the Friends of Houghton Hall Park volunteers carrying out habitat management. Together they contributed over 160 hours' coppicing, surveying, building and erecting bird boxes, clearing vegetation and promoting the park and its new facilities.

In addition, each young volunteer attained a discovery level John Muir Award in recognition of the work they have achieved in adopting Central Bedfordshire Council's Houghton Hall Park as their special wild place. The Youth Rangers met four of the John Muir Award challenges – Discover, Explore, Conserve and Share. They received their awards from the John Muir Trust at a presentation event held on 18th February.
